

Waiting for the Release of the New Holographic Game

By Ashok Kumara (May 15, 2010)

Seven billion human players on the earth passionately engaged in several holographic games, so skillfully created by the collective consciousness of the cosmic players (souls) - what a magnificent scene!

The "money game" is the most popular one, a game that cannot be won; yet it attracts the most number of players. The "family game" is the second most popular one, a very colorful game filled with a variety of dramas and emotional experiences. The "disease game" is an interesting one where humans manifest suffering in every creative way just to get attention.

The "enlightenment game" has gained popularity in the past few decades, a game in which most humans victimize themselves playing the role of a devotee, giving their power away to a god or a guru. The most recent game is the "ascension game", a game in which humans play the role of light-workers who have come to co-create a golden earth.

I have played all these games to my heart's content, and quite bored of them. I know that a new holographic game is under construction. The release date is unknown. I am just waiting and watching in amusement all the old games still under play.

Hmm! This is my shortest article. When the new game is released, I will be back in action. Until then, good-bye!
